In the summer of 1897, sixteen-year-old Warren Mehtens and his best friend, seventeen-year-old Charlie Cole, left their homes in Seattle, Washington, to join the great Alaskan gold rush. They traveled by ship to Skagway, Alaska, and then hiked over the Chilkoot Pass to the Klondike River.

Warren and Charlie were part of a vast migration of people from all over the world who were drawn to the Klondike by the promise of gold. They faced many challenges and hardships along the way, including extreme cold, hunger, and disease. But they never gave up their dreams of finding gold.

After months of searching, Warren and Charlie finally struck it rich. They found a large deposit of gold on a creek that they named after themselves. They became wealthy men overnight and returned home to Seattle as heroes.

The story of Warren Mehtens and Charlie Cole is an unforgettable tale of adventure, friendship, and perseverance. It is a story that will inspire readers of all ages.

"Look for Me, Warren is a gripping and inspiring story. A.J. Golding does a masterful job of bringing the Klondike gold rush to life. This is a book that will stay with you long after you finish reading it." - Seattle Times

A.J. Golding is a historian and writer who specializes in the history of the American West. He is the author of several books, including The Klondike Gold Rush: A Social and Economic History and The American West: A History. Golding lives in Seattle, Washington.

"We had been hiking for hours, and we were both exhausted. The Chilkoot Pass was a steep and treacherous trail, and we were struggling to keep up with the other stampedeers.

"I can't go on," Charlie said. "I'm too tired."

"We have to keep going," I said. "We're almost there."

"I don't think I can make it," Charlie said.

"Yes, you can," I said. "I'll help you."

I put my arm around Charlie's shoulder and helped him up the trail. We hiked for another hour, and finally we reached the summit of the pass. We looked down at the Klondike River valley below, and we knew that we had made it.

"We did it," Charlie said. "We're here."

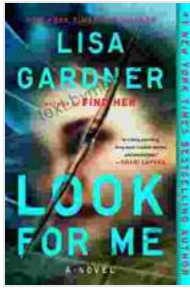

We stood there for a moment, catching our breath and enjoying the view. Then we started down the trail, towards the gold fields."
