

Pedro Menendez De Aviles: Captain General of the Ocean Sea

Pedro Menendez De Aviles was a Spanish explorer who founded the first permanent European settlement in North America. He was born in Aviles, Spain, in 1519. Menendez was a skilled navigator and military commander. He served in the Spanish army for many years, fighting in the Italian Wars and the Ottoman-Venetian War. In 1565, he was appointed Captain General of the Ocean Sea by King Philip II of Spain. This gave him command of the Spanish fleet in the Americas.

Menendez's mission was to establish a permanent Spanish settlement in North America. He set sail from Spain in 1565 with a fleet of 11 ships and 1,500 men. After a long and difficult voyage, he arrived at the coast of Florida in August 1565. He explored the coast for several weeks, searching for a suitable location for his settlement. Finally, he chose a site on the north coast of Florida, which he named San Agustin. San Agustin was the first permanent European settlement in North America.

Menendez served as governor of Florida for several years. He was a harsh and authoritarian ruler, but he was also a skilled administrator. He established a number of towns and forts in Florida, and he defended the colony against attacks from the French and the Native Americans. Menendez died in San Agustin in 1574.

Pedro Menendez De Aviles was a complex and controversial figure. He was a ruthless conqueror, but he was also a visionary leader. He founded the first permanent European settlement in North America, and he helped to establish Spain as a major power in the Americas.
