Tyson's New Orange Shirt

The last day of September, Tyson got ready for school, only to find that his Mom wanted him to wear a different shirt. His orange shirt. Tyson wasn't even sure about it, so his Mom had to explain just why it was important that on September 30th he wear orange.

In Canada, for over 150 years, the government has been trying to force First Nations children to be educated in white schools, to be taught as the white children. This was done by the government to "kill the Indian in the child." These schools were often miles and miles from where they and their families resided. The Truth and Reconciliation Commission has uncovered and documented many of the atrocities that took place in these residential schools. It has exposed the inter-generational trauma that is the system's legacy.

Tyson's New Orange Shirt tells the story of how his Mom explained to him the importance of recognizing the impact on children and how his different shirt Tyson might have been one of those kids!
